WOUNDED.

Let me lie down.

Just now in the shade of this cotton-mesh tree,
Here lies on the trampled grass where I lay down.
The song of the combat and where they lie.
The glad cry of victory, cheer upon cheer!

Let me lie down.

Oh, it was grand!

Like the impetuous charged, in triumph so.

The impetuous fury and thunders were there.

On, on, evermore, onwards, ever driving and dead,

With the red under foot and our flag overhead.

Oh, it was grand!

Weary and faint.

Prone on the soldier's couch, ah, how I rest!
With this shriveled head, and faltering heart.

Comrades, at call-of, when I shall be sought,

Day I fought till I fell, and fell where I fought,

Wounded and faint.

Oh, that last charge!

Right through the steel bulwarks of the fort,

Through with faltering, cleaving, the wall.

Right in their midst, in dismal and gloomy death,

Oh, that last charge!

It was duty!
